Economic and Market Commentary January 2025

Interest rates started the new year with a decidedly bearish tone. Rates moved higher as the markets attempted to interpret how the economy would respond to new initiatives from the Trump administration. Potentially higher tariffs, deficit financing and the risk of poor inflation management pushed interest rates back up towards the highest levels from 2024 with longer maturities leading the way. However, by mid-month, inflation data appeared to moderate, and rates fully unwound the selloff and ultimately closed the month modestly lower. The Federal Reserve ("Fed") maintained a "wait and see" approach due to the high degree of uncertainty around how various policy initiatives will impact the real economy. Currently, market pricing indicates an expectation for the federal funds rate to be just 50 basis points lower by the end of the year, almost 80 basis points higher than was telegraphed in September of 2024. The yield on the 2-year Treasury ended the month four basis points ("bps") lower at 4.20%. The yield on the benchmark 10-year Treasury fell three bps to 4.54% and the 30-year Treasury yield rose one bps to 4.79%.

At the first Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) meeting in 2025, the Fed held the federal funds rate steady after cutting by 100 basis points at consecutive meetings in 2024. The FOMC was expected to stand pat in January as the core personal consumption expenditures (PCE) price index had stagnated at 2.8% year-over-year for the last three months. Further, the December jobs report showed a strong labor market, gaining jobs at 170,000 per month on average in the past three months. However, we believe interest rates could move lower and sooner than investors expect in 2025. First, while the U.S. has enjoyed a solid string of job growth readings of late, the unemployment rate could move slightly higher in 2025, as it rarely hovers at the same level for more than 12 months and job growth will likely slow down as the year progresses. Second, core inflation could moderate more quickly than investors expect. The three-month average monthly core PCE price index reading in December was within the Fed's target consistent range. We expect further moderation in 2025 as the shelter component abates. Consequently, the 12-month trailing core PCE could dip much faster in the first quarter of 2025 and reach the Fed's target by the summer of 2025. Lastly, the current federal funds rate is still meaningfully higher than policymakers' neutral rate estimate (4.30% versus 3.00%), meaning monetary policy remains restrictive. This leaves plenty of room to cut rates if inflation moderates and/or the labor market cools.

Florida Trust Day to Day Fund

The Florida Trust Day to Day Fund posted a total return of +0.38% in January, compared to the benchmark ICE BofA Three-Month Treasury Index return of +0.37%. Fiscal year-to-date, the DtD Fund has returned +1.60% versus 1.54% for the benchmark. The net 7-day SEC yield of the Day to Day Fund was 4.42%, compared to 4.52% at 2024-year end. Comparable prime institutional government funds had an average yield of 4.10% on 1/31. The Fund continues to provide safety, income, and liquidity of investments in a stable, $1 NAV Fund.

We continue to diversify credit exposure by investing in high-quality commercial paper ("CP"), Yankee CDs ("YCDs"), and money market tranches of ABS, and municipal variable rate demand notes ("VRDNs") as we search to maximize yield without adding volatility or sacrificing liquidity. Municipals offer revenue streams secured by debt issued by essential services exhibit inelastic demand and are a favorable alternative to repo and Treasury bills. While we look to maximize credit sector investments in the fund, we have kept the maturity profile shorter as historically tight spreads do not compensate enough to merit longer. In addition, the fund holds a 39% allocation to floating rate notes (including VRDNs), averaging a 5.0% yield collectively.

The fund remains highly liquid with approximately 36% of the portfolio invested in overnight and short-term securities. Another 27% of the portfolio is invested in government or government guaranteed securities, also enhancing liquidity. The weighted-average maturity of the portfolio is currently 22 days. The fund processed over $120 million in flows in December, ending with ~$38 million net outflows. The fund is assigned Fitch rating agency's highest Money Market Fund Rating of AAA mmf.

While we acknowledge the lagged effects of restrictive monetary policy could cause extra stress on the economy, we currently don't foresee the need for the Fed to accelerate the path of rate reductions. The results of the US election pose potential threats with higher inflation and onerous implications for higher deficits. However, any proposed policies by the new administration are too early to call until actual policies are implemented. As most central banks continue their easing cycles, we are keeping a close eye on how global economies and currencies respond. Given the uncertain nature of domestic and global policy, we are biased towards maintaining liquidity as current risk premiums do not compensate investors for additional risk.
